for .Q: Integer number different from expected by BigDecimal I have a Java app that is producing a serialized/deserialized binary file that contains a BigDecimal as a property. Unfortunately, the serialized version of the object has a value that is not the same when it is re-read: I get the following exception on deserialization: Exception in thread "main" java.lang.NumberFormatException: For input string: "2.00000000066925038164889157669853457485203 0274310099336" According to my understanding of BigDecimal, the above number should be 2.00000000066925038164889157669 8534574852030274310099336. Any idea what is the problem?
Thanks! A: You are trying to read a BigDecimal as an integer.
BigDecimals can not be represented in binary floating point numbers. Try to read it as a Double instead: Double d = new BigDecimal("2.000000

a document I'm trying to open up a specific element (or element's contents, really) with javascript from the file system. So I'm using window.open with the name of the desired element and the path to the file. The only problem is, that I need to be able to prevent opening the same file twice. I could just have an if/else statement, but that's obviously not working. How can I prevent the second file from opening? Edit: I should note that I'm using both chrome and safari A: The only way is to have a flag. Store the flag in localStorage and only execute the function if it hasn't been set. It's the only way to work. The flag can be anything, the problem is it can be set by any number of scripts (i.e. button clicks and url hooks). If you only want one function to access, then store the path to the file (or element) in localStorage as well and use the same flag. [Studies on chemical constituents of Polygonum multiflorum in Sichuan]. To study chemical constituents of Polygonum multiflorum (PM) in Sichuan. The constituents were isolated and purified by column chromatography on macroporous resin, silica gel, Sephadex LH-20 and preparative HPLC. Their structures were identified on the basis of NMR and MS. Ten compounds were isolated and identified as chrysophanol (1), emodin (2), physcion (3), chrysophanol-8-O-beta-D-glucoside (4), kaempferol (5), quercetin (6), luteolin (7), myricitrin (8), kaempferol-3-O
