A light microscopy study of the distribution and motility of the sensory innervation of the avian cochlea. The distribution and fine structure of the sensory afferents to the avian cochlea were studied with horseradish peroxidase. The results suggest that the main afferents to the cochlea of the domestic fowl enter the cochlea from the osseous spiral lamina of the basal turn of the cochlea, after having passed over the posterior third of the basilar papilla. The afferent fibers enter the organ of Corti of the outermost basal row of cochlear turns. From this basal turn of the organ of Corti they extend down the basal lamina of the Reissner's membrane and turn around the scalae of Reissner's membrane to supply the inner hair cells and the inner pillar cells, but not the outer hair cells. The afferent fibers appear to penetrate the inner hair cells and the overlying cells of the spiral ligament, and then travel down the otic capsule and cartilage to the posterior crista where they innervate the lateral and medial laminae of the 09e8f5149f

Vatican orders all its families and employees to shun U.S. President Obama and his staff as they live in various cities around the world. The Roman Catholic Church in the United States has issued a ban against its families and staff on American soil to avoid face-to-face contact with U.S. President Barack Obama and his aides. The United States has been a long-standing friend and ally of the Vatican, and its top-ranking clerics still visit the United States regularly for events or to meet foreign dignitaries. But with the U.S. administration embroiled in a series of controversies regarding the American healthcare system, fiscal policy and immigration and gun control, Vatican officials decided to take action, according to a report in the Italian newspaper La Repubblica. The ban was issued by the Vatican's secretary of state Cardinal Pietro Parolin during an audience with many American bishops on Thursday, April 9. "The Holy See ordered its diplomatic corps and its families to avoid physical contact with the president's entourage," or "any official, whomsoever, if he or she is a member of the presidential administration," Vatican spokesman Father Federico Lombardi confirmed the move on Monday. The ban affects the Vatican city-state, as well as all its diplomats and staff overseas, and any American citizen accompanying them. Families of those employees will also be banned, the report said. The blanket ban "regards the person in the White House as a fount of evil, a modern Antichrist," said Father Daniel Marlowe, a Washington-based writer and editor of the blog Dignitatis Humanae. "What else would you call a man who has surrounded himself with radical Islamists and their henchmen?" Marlowe said. Rome did not immediately comment when contacted on Sunday by Al Jazeera's Lauren
