Management of the company listed on the stock exchange. In short, the one who is engaged in a certain business and the one who is the shareholder of the company on the stock exchange is called a broker. Brokerage companies do not deal with stock markets and are not shareholders. Moreover, their role in the management of financial assets is no different from the role of a broker. The broker is an intermediary between the client and the exchange. More precisely, between the exchange and the information that a broker needs to make a deal with stocks and bonds. Well, of course, brokerage houses are not on stock exchanges, they provide services for the sale of financial assets. For the provision of this service, a sale and purchase transaction of the company's shares and securities occurs.
