Our first review is of Rubbies Bread & Breakfast, which is an all-day café in the Darwin CBD that takes bread and rolls as seriously as it does coffee. Here's a look at why and how we think you should be treating your next takeaway. In the Darwin CBD, you'll find a host of places to grab a takeaway coffee or eat a sandwich. But it's not often you'll see something that combines both in one café – not in a way that makes you feel you're actually eating food, but in the way you expect it from a counter takeaway. That's if you can ignore the fact that you're actually eating in one of the CBD's best-decorated coffee houses. Not All Bread Is Created Equal That doesn't mean that coffee and sandwiches aren't a good fit, just that you need to make sure the bread you're getting your serve on is going to be the one for you. Rubbies Bread & Breakfast has been providing their customers with hand-pulled, sourdough-style loaves, wraps, croissants and baguettes as well as the usual range of sandwiches, beers, wines and coffees for over a year now. Each morning at their breakfast counter, co-owner Emily Thomas prepares carefully selected single-origin coffees, made to perfection using the Italian-style espresso machines and grinders imported from Italy. She's the one doing the trimming and the twisting, adding touches that put her attention to detail to work. The final product is a sweet and fragrant espresso drink. One reason it's such an enjoyable experience is that she cares enough to make sure the daily combination of breads, cheeses, meats, sausages, yoghurts and cereals with your coffee is going to be a perfect match. It's this attention to detail that's partly responsible for the Delissi Lovey, a croissant and cheese filled with a spread of cream and

The homeostasis of plasma glucose and free fatty acid (FFA) is mainly controlled by the brain. The hypothalamus plays a central role in regulating food intake and energy homeostasis, providing signals to the neuroendocrine system. The hypothalamus responds to peripheral metabolic signals, which are relayed through afferent neurons, and to metabolic hormones, which are released into the blood via the portal vein. The regulation of food intake and energy homeostasis is achieved by two opposing neuronal networks in the hypothalamus, one that promotes energy intake and the other that elicits energy expenditure. Although the hypothalamus is well-known for its control of energy expenditure and some functions in regulating metabolic, it is also associated with other important functions such as in-take of nutrients and neuroendocrine regulation. The goal of this review is to provide a broad overview on the role of hypothalamus in regulating food intake and energy homeostasis focusing on the neuroanatomical organization, mediators and neuronal circuits involved in this regulation. A cross-section of literature pertaining to neuroanatomical organization, mediators and neuronal circuits involved in the regulation of food intake and energy homeostasis in the hypothalamus are examined. In addition, the brain nuclei that control energy metabolism within the hypothalamus are discussed. The hypothalamus is considered the brain's control center for food intake and energy homeostasis. The hypothalamus is a highly organized 3e33713323
