The conversion process is quick and simple, and the user interface is well-designed. To be honest, I wish that Tenorshare had supported more output formats. But for a free and simple application, Tenorshare HEIC Converter is worth its price tag.Q: Web API - Stateless way of debugging using ASP.NET I want to create a simple web API application that can expose the following function: public Customer Get(string id) It's simple enough, and I'm using Entity Framework in my code. I was wondering what the best way to debug this application would be. I'm assuming it has something to do with the new ASP.NET environment, since most of the solutions are related to ASP.NET MVC. Here are my thoughts: I could create a web service that would only allow public access to this function. This isn't ideal because I don't want to expose the function unless it's needed. I could create a super simple API application that would be free of Entity Framework. This could be nice for development, but it still feels like a step back. I could create a web API controller that would forward calls to my EF code. This would be ideal since it would

The term "academic ethics" refers to the set of rules which a student should obey in the field of study. Most universities have defined specific guidelines regarding the use of the internet, social networks, emails and other online resources. This handbook aims to provide an overview of online academic rules and guidelines, in order to help students make informed decisions in their online activity. Students will learn how to be more responsible in internet use, how to improve their ethical online behavior, and how to learn from and avoid online misconduct. Learn ethical behavior online Conducting a research project online Ethical use of Google Self-Censorship: You should be prepared to accept a reasonable amount of censorship for the sake of personal privacy and security. The Internet is a public forum, not a private one. If someone wants to make you angry or upset, they will do it. The same is true for information. If you are not prepared to receive some negativity, then the Internet is not for you. Threats to Internet security Privacy in an age of Big Data Top Cyber Threats and How to Avoid Them How to Protect Personal Information on the Internet The biggest and scariest threat is your privacy. There are many ways to steal and use your personal information, and the worst part is, it can happen to you at any time. Don't let it. Be conscious about what you share and keep your privacy settings on your social networks, like Facebook and Twitter, open to all to see. Be careful when you download files and don't click on any links. Never give out your email address, password, or any personal information to anyone online. Securing your information on the internet is a difficult challenge. Some of the things you can do to keep your information safe are: Avoid sharing your personal information, no matter how seemingly harmless the link Always keep your information private and not make it available for public viewing Never give out personal information or login information to a website Use a firewall to protect your computer Never open emails or other attachments unless you know where they are coming from Use anti-malware software to keep your computer secure Protect your computer with the latest security software Enable notifications and use software to alert you of any threats Enable parental controls on your computer The law gives you the right to withdraw your consent to this process.
