Hence, by using a separate software, you make sure that you do not get locked out and can use the computer when you need. Finally, the tool does not interfere with the boot process and does not change the settings. It is a simple and straightforward solution for you to prevent auto lock and run the screensaver. What's New in the KeepOn?

I built this utility to help prevent computers from automatically locking screens and going into the screensaver. It works by checking the state of the power button, pressing it, and then exiting the screensaver after a specific amount of time. The code is open-source (GPLv3), and I'd love to get more feedback on the project. Using KeepOn is easy. Download the installer or the portable version (zip archive) from the download page. Extract the zip archive and run KeepOn.exe. That's it. You're done. No command line needed. Click the system tray icon to disable and enable auto lock, set the unlock duration and set the screensaver timeout. You can also customize the auto lock settings via the Windows settings or choose a power plan via control panel.
