Detailed Version Which Gamemode? The original in-game scoring system gave us a view into the lives of our players. Each time you kill an opponent, the redmatch logo shows up for a short time. You can see how a few players kill, and when the kills happen. We loved it, but we received criticism that it is too late in the game to experience such a system. We thought it would be interesting to let you know what your opponents play. Now, we can also show how much time you spend in the map and all kinds of statistics. Play Online Redmatch 2 is playable online as a single player or in multiplayer matches with up to 4 players. Redmatch 2 is easy to join. Just create an account and sign in to Redmatch. Optimized Gamemode Choices We saw that players wanted to have more options in what kind of game they want to play. We did not want to sacrifice balance with that. That is why we made an optimized selection of gamemodes, so you can select the exact game you want to play. Typical Multiplayer Match • You play one map on your own against the rest of your opponents. • The match is over after you have killed your opponent. • You score points for each kill. The best result gets the win. Crossfire • You play with up to 8 players online. • You fight to survive in a shooter game, on 8 maps. • The c9d1549cdd

Plan The Repopulation Plan, also known as HR 5353, refers to the proposed United States Census of the United States. It outlines a plan to count every man, woman, and child in the United States to better comply with the provisions of Article III, Section 2 of the United States Constitution, the purpose of which is to count all people living in the United States at the time of ratification of the constitution. The exact principle of this plan has been used in other countries. The plan was developed in the early 1960s, by the Intelligence Collection and Analysis Division at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) under the direction of Harry W. Jenson. The U.S. Congressional Survey, part of the National Center for Statistics and Analysis, financed by the government, was also involved. The plan was never officially proposed as a government policy, but it was studied by the United States Census Bureau in December 1972. The plan, framed as a Presidential speech, was delivered at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration Headquarters Building in Washington, DC on January 28, 1973.

Background Since 1965, a Census Bureau-study group chaired by James W. Porter (vice-chairman) had made a proposal to Congress for resuming census counts; this proposal became the basis of the Repopulation plan. In 1972, Rep. Daniel K. Inouye, who chaired the U.S. Census Subcommittee, and Rep. Donald Paul Roe, chairman of the Joint Subcommittee, arranged meetings at which members of the Repopulation plan were introduced to members of Congress and to a few journalists who were then preparing articles for the March 1973 issue of National Geographic magazine. Porter and his colleagues from the Census Bureau tried to discourage The Repopulation plan, mentioning that it had been devised by the intelligence division of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) and that no federal agency was responsible for the proposed count. They never spelled out the plan's details, keeping its existence secret. At a house subcommittee meeting, one Repopulation plan senior official explained that the Repopulation plan was a "brainchild of a small group of people at NASA and it was a joke". Implementation The Repopulation plan is presented in Presidential speech "Structure of the Nation" (28 January 1973) by H.R. 5353 Department of Commerce. Methodology The Repopulation plan would count every man,
