Chiknese degrees pdf my home partner. tutorial sql server sp3 vs sql server 2008. pdf.Q: What is the best way to share files between Ubuntu and Windows in an on-prem setup? I am in a Windows 10 on-prem setup and I currently share Windows files with NTFS to Ubuntu with SMB. I'm not familiar with GDrive, Box, OneDrive... I was wondering what is the best (most secure way) to share files from Windows to Ubuntu in this scenario? I need it to be: scalable (I don't want to use one GDrive or Box account for my entire organisation) private (no single account should access other account) I do not want to copy all files every time and lose them on the different Ubuntu OSes (i.e. best solution for non-Linux desktop users) Doesn't GDrive leverage Box account and one Google account? Doesn't OneDrive leverage Box account? A: You could use a local file share library such as Seafiler: You can install it on Linux/Mac/Windows, and it's free to open source web-based clients. Here is Seafiler's website: There is a Linux client available at and Windows and Mac clients are available at A polling analysis from the Washington Post reveals that Donald Trump's support among female Republicans has increased since he took over the presidency. That might not be so surprising to anyone who's been following Trump's female fanclub since the beginning, but the Post's data adds some insight into who is "most excited" about how Trump is performing. It seems like the group of women who are most excited about Trump are "first time voters in the last 3 years," women who are "whites without college degrees," and "white women ages 45 and older," among others. In other words, they're not the "shy suburban women" who are
