The Polling Company conducted the survey online among 581 likely voters in Wisconsin. It had a margin of error of plus or minus 4 percentage points. Since winning the presidency, Donald Trump has sought to forge a closer connection to working-class voters, particularly in Rust Belt states like Wisconsin that were key to his victory. Trump has made infrastructure spending a cornerstone of his campaign, promising a $1 trillion plan to fix the country's roads, bridges and other infrastructure. He also wants to cut taxes. Meanwhile, he has highlighted Democratic Sen. Bernie Sanders as his main rival to secure the nomination. Sanders and Ryan are going head-to-head in Wisconsin. There is no state in the union that has more feeling than Wisconsin, Paul Ryan said on CNBC's "Squawk Box." The survey showed that nearly 49 percent of voters support Sanders' campaign, while 37 percent back Trump. Sanders and Trump met last week in Wisconsin for a Democratic presidential debate. The other Democratic candidates are former Vice President Joe Biden, Sen. Kamala Harris and Pete Buttigieg, mayor of South Bend, Indiana. All six candidates participated. In Wisconsin, Biden is the only candidate from the "safe" Democratic group. Among other Democrats, Harris, Buttigieg and Sanders all had levels of support that exceed 30 percent. * */ public class EasyProduct { public String productId; public String productName; public String producer; public String manufacturer; public String category; public String quantity; public String getProductId() { return productId; } public void setProductId(String productId) { this.productId = productId; } public String getProductName() { return productName; } public void setProductName(String
