In the world of the Vanir and the Aesir, the Elden have risen, and the life of adventurers has changed forever. The world itself was born from the beating of drums, the sounds of flames, and the screams of the dead, and all of this is now being celebrated in a new fantasy action RPG. Your hand is guided by the Elden Ring. From above, you see the lands below through your mask. From there, you find the next challenge and, with your allies, you conquer it. The Vanir and the Aesir met in a battle and, in the end, a truce was reached. The Elden Ring is in the end of the Far North, known as a land of darkness. • THE RISE OF THE NEW FANTASY ACTION RPG The Elden Ring is born. This world has become a battlefield where great heroes of the previous era have become corrupt. The Elden, once a society of gods who floated on the heavens, have descended to this world, and the lands are split into factions and armies. Now, your task is to ride forth with the Elden and, in the process, convert the lands below to the next world. * THE WORLD OF THE NEW FANTASY ACTION RPG The world of the Elden Ring is divided into the Lands Below and the Lands Between. The Lands Below is where the divine blood of the Elden Ring lies, and, unfortunately, all the power it holds, as well as blood, is used to slaughter mortals in the Lands Below. The Lands Between is where the vast world of the Elden Ring, all the lands that cover the land, lies. It is also in the Lands Between that the elves live. * ENJOY A VAST WORLD FULL OF ADVENTURE In the Lands Between, you ride the lands of the world, and you solve the otherworldly problems that occur. Across the land, you can encounter a variety of players of the Forgotten Wars. Depending on the conditions, the gifts, and the ranks, a variety of conversations will occur, and a variety of quests will be offered to you. With these quests, you can continue to conquer the world, and you can lay a track of glory for your name. From above, you see the lands below through your mask. From there, you find the next challenge and, with your allies, you conquer it. * YOUR HAND IS GUIDED BY THE ELDEN RING An Elden

What's new in Elden Ring:

Q: How do the adaptors fit into the Structural Realism model? A few months ago I became a follower of the internet-famous Structural Realism (SR) and I really like the approach. SR is best described in one recent answer. It explains the two arrows from mental states to contents of mental states and the (apparent) contents of mental states to external physical states. In this answer and others, two notions keep coming up: The idea of content requiring a recognizer and the idea that both the external and internal arrows are ontic. And yet I never see a clear answer of how the interpreter fits into the model and is there a codification of all eight transformational characteristics that SR includes? This question is mainly pertains to Austin's (1962) account of trying to explain perception. It is quite hard to read it. A: I call myself a realist, not a structural realist, which means I think the relationship between minds and the world is sufficiently detailed, but there's too much variation in minds and the world to fit them into just one mold. (See the self-replicating AI below.) To me, what's in my head is very physical, what's out there, even if it's hidden from most of us, is also very physical. The difference between my mind and the world is that one is active and the other is passive, so that if I look out the window and see a mountain, my mind is acquiring information that is sent from my brain to my eyes to my ears. So, the notion of a recognizer seems unnecessary, because even if I'm completely blind, it's my mind that's acquiring the information. On the other hand, an enzyme is something that's part of a biochemical reaction, where it is performing a task, not something that is recognizing which chemical compounds exist outside my body. An enzyme in my body is either breaking something down or building something up, but it is not recognizing the process that is taking place. Your statement "The illusion that we see the world is in our minds, not in the mind of the Creator" is essential. If you are under the illusion that we see the world, you are not seeing it, you are describing it, and a description doesn't necessarily mean anything. Anything that can be described, therefore, can be simulated, so unless you want to exclude simulation from possibility, you cannot derive a general rule that
