Marquise Goodwin, so quiet during the 2014 season, turned in a quietly sensational season for the wide receiver that included a spectacular performance in the New Orleans Superdome. Goodwin hauled in a career high 111 catches for 1,313 yards, 10 touchdowns. Goodwin's 2014 campaign dwarfs his 2013 statistics, when he made 47 receptions for 523 yards and a pair of touchdowns. The main reason for the increase in catches and yards, according to his coach is the two more complete games he had in 2014 (14 in 2013) and the improved offensive production he got out of the Saints' offense. Saints Offensive Coordinator Pete Carmichael acknowledged that the addition of Goodwin to the Saints offensive arsenal gave new life to the Saints offense. Last season, New Orleans threw over 54 percent of its passes, ranking 19th in the league and ranking last in passing efficiency, according to Football Outsiders. Goodwin, now 25-years-old, gives the Saints and Drew Brees a veteran presence to the pass-catcher corps. In a statement to reporters when he was announced as a First-Team All-Pro, Goodwin said "This is a huge honor and a great achievement. And to be put on the same field with such greats as Champ [Bailey], Larry Fitzgerald and Anquan Boldin, just to name a few, is very humbling. To get voted as a Pro Bowl starter is a special accomplishment." Worst-Risk Best-Collar In the 2012 draft, the Saints grabbed 5-foot-10, 176-pound wide receiver Kenny Stills out of Florida State in round four, No. 99 overall. The Saints stuck Stills as a returner, giving him the title of "Hollywood Brown." It did not work out quite as planned. Stills appeared in just three games (five starts) for the Saints during his rookie season. He caught 16 passes for a pair of touchdowns. A broken finger in the season opener nagged Stills and he played in just eight games during the 2012 season. He then, by all accounts, got his act together. Last year, Stills made a big splash in the NFL, playing in 15 games and making 44 catches for 738 yards and a pair of touchdowns. The season netted Stills the Pro Bowl nod. Stills parlayed his strong season into a big contract from the Saints this offseason, which included a

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates generally to plastic injection molding and more specifically to reciprocating molding. 2. Description of the Prior Art Plastic molding technology is an area of great development. Plastic injection molding offers a number of advantages over other manufacturing techniques. One advantage is the ability to mold higher volume parts at a lower cost than by the casting or machining of metal, metal alloys or other materials. Another advantage is in that the molded parts are generally free of pores and have a smooth finish. Typically, plastic injection molding can be carried out by filling a mold with plastic material using a screw or plunger driven by a power device, through an injection mechanism that is in communication with the mold. The force needed to fill the mold is provided by the force of the power device. Once filled, the mold closes and the part is ejected from the mold. The use of plastic allows the injection molding process to be energy efficient, because it does not require heat injection for filling the mold. Conventionally, it is necessary to adapt a reciprocating power drive device to a plastic injection mold. Generally, the reciprocating motion is obtained from a hydraulically driven motion in which the fluid is released from a chamber as it is released into the mold. One drawback to the conventional reciprocating power drive is the time required to fill the mold. To fill a mold, which has a volume of approximately three to six gallons, typically requires approximately 20 to 30 seconds, depending upon the mold structure, the amount of force applied by the power device and the material. Another drawback is that the fluid is recycled and reused, which increases the cost of the hydraulic power unit. The repeated heating and cooling of the fluid resulting from the recycling also contributes to a reduction in the service life of the hydraulic fluid. Another drawback is that the timing of the injection process is not strictly defined, even with the use of springs, which is necessary when using an electronic or mechanical drive. If a spring is not properly positioned, the timing may not be precise and may overlap the next cycle, rendering the plastic part unusable. Another drawback is that a flexible component is required to allow a return motion of the device. This flexing of the power device is not desirable because it results in a loss of resolution of the plunger tip. When plastic material is injected through a screw driven by a conventional reciprocating power drive, the screw acts as a piston that pushes the plastic material in the mold
