Letter of Recommendation and Testimonial Composing- A Very Beneficial Task In Your Career Letter of Recommendation and Testimonial Composing- A Very Beneficial Task In Your Career There will be many occasions in your life when you will have to write a letter of recommendation or a testimonial, or both. The hard part is in the preparation, as you will have to find out as much as you can about the person to whom you will be writing the letter. This is the part where you must be careful, as you might end up writing things that are unprofessional and that will damage your reputation. In order to avoid these problems, you must follow a few simple guidelines. 1. Find The Appropriate Contact Information You have to start with finding out what the person to whom you are writing a letter of recommendation, or a testimonial is willing to give to you. This will make it much easier to communicate with the person, as you will know what they are willing to share with you. You can start with the address and contact information from their resumes, as well as their phone number. If they do not have this information, you should ask a co-worker if you can contact them, and you should be able to find the appropriate information by searching their name on social networks or online communities. 2. Research The Name You will also have to know the name of the person to whom you are writing the letter of recommendation or the testimonial. This is required in order to be able to find out more about them. You have to make sure that you understand their previous careers, so that you can choose the right letter. You might find out that the person has done several things that you are interested in. Therefore, you can choose to write a recommendation letter or a testimonial about them. For example, you can write a letter about a person who has worked in your previous company. You do not have to say things that you are not sure about. You do not have to write a message that is not sure if it will be appropriate. For example, you do not have to say that you are satisfied with them or
