She was noted for becoming the first female playback singer in Hindi cinema at the age of 17 when she sang a devotional song in the film Ram Teri Ganga Maili in 1942. Her career in films began with the 1944 film Bhakt Veer, which was a tribute to the freedom fighters of India. It was the first Bollywood movie to be hit upon by American audiences and in many places, European audiences. Kajol stills in the film include Raat Baki Hai Kya, with her dancing to the tune of the song, and in the scene where she stands up to dance with the song. Kajol became the first Indian film star to be seen as a heroine. In 1947, she became the first actress to win the "Filmfare Best Female Debut Award", in which the prize was not for the actress, but for her performance. Her first major role was in the film Taxi Driver in 1949, at age 19. She played the lead role
