Population-Based Surveillance for Neuroinvasive Disease in an Urban Population in Zhejiang Province, China. Neuroinvasive disease due to Wuhan coronavirus 2 (SARS-CoV-2) has emerged globally, and it has affected many countries, most of which are resource-limited. In Zhejiang province, the first positive case was diagnosed on January 26, 2020. However, data on the number of cases and the epidemiologic characteristics of this disease in Zhejiang province are unknown. To describe the epidemiologic features of Wuhan coronavirus 2 infection in Zhejiang province and provide baseline data for future analysis of this disease. The first 536 patients with confirmed Wuhan coronavirus 2 infection from January 26 to February 11, 2020, were identified in Zhejiang province through active surveillance. The demographic, clinical, and laboratory characteristics of patients were recorded on a standardized form. In Zhejiang, there were 12 new cases per day on average (12.6/day from Jan 26 to Feb 11, 2020). The mean age of patients was 38.5 years; most were men (66.3%) and farmers (77.2%). A total of 84.9% of patients had severe symptoms. Of these patients, 58.6% required admission, and 19.7% required mechanical ventilation.

Among the total patients, 25.3% had neurological symptoms, and the incidence was 4.7/100,000 people. Of the patients with neurological symptoms, 96.1% had a diagnosis of Wuhan coronavirus 2 infection confirmed by real-time reverse-transcription polymerase chain reaction. The clinical manifestations of Wuhan coronavirus 2 infection, especially neurological disease, are severe. Most patients were farmers and worked in close contact with persons, and most of them had no immunity. To control this outbreak, a community-wide campaign should be implemented to remind and educate the public and close contacts of the preventive measures. Genius of Inwardness
