The Galactic Fuchian Empire has existed in space for over 300 years, and is a militaristic spacefaring civilization. Disdainful of all other spacefaring civilizations, the Empire has conquered and claimed a vast portion of the galaxy, including the ancient homeworld of the Hime. Despite their newly acquired territory, the Empire is in need of expansion, and Fuchian Chronicles is the story of Kimi, a young cadet in their Imperial Academy. On the day of her graduation, she is assigned to a ship bound for the planet called Souha. Decisions must be made now about her path in life as it will shape her future... Fuchian Chronicles is a remake of my first game, Space Fox Kimi, which was originally released on Steam in 2018. I have learned a lot about game development since my first release, and wanted to update the game with new graphics, gameplay, and various other improvements before continuing with a sequel. Players who've played Space Fox Kimi will notice many similarities in the story with the original, but some story beats have been altered and there will be new plot points as well. I sincerely hope you enjoy my game, and thank you for supporting me! About The Game Thread

What's new:

(29 Mar 2000) Close to 75 years ago, Selene woke in an impossibly cold shower in her chambers at Knoll Hall. She was fast asleep except for an itch crawling up her nose. She knew something was wrong, she tried to adjust her eyes to the light, and that's when she saw a pale blue glow changing to black as the figure disappeared into the shadows. She closed her eyes again just when the last of the light went. She got out from under her blankets and pulled on her dressing gown. She took a bath and tried to comb her thick tawny hair. Her madwoman's step hit the hard-wood floors as she hurried out into the corridor, a blue mist following her down the endless passage. She heard her heart beating faintly in her ears, and she liked it; it was the sound of another person in there with her. Her hands were shaking as she took her left trouser leg to pull it up and looked down at her calf. A scar had healed ugly on one of her knees, and she made a fist and clenched it tight as she dug a finger into the side of the flesh there. She studied it, then lightly massaged the wound with her thumb. It was still tender, but she was well healed, all but for this. The bright scar was a reminder to always be prepared for more fighting and finding a way to survive. In the kitchen of Knoll Hall, Selene heard footsteps pulling back the entire sideboard with well-oiled ease. The smell of cooked meat made her stomach growl, and she paced up to the front door. Her hands was shaking again with need, and she opened the door to a warm table with a very long pre-prepared supper that was mostly unfamiliar to her. The sight of it made her stomach rebel and her cheeks blush. Suddenly, she felt hungry and decided to take the opportunity to feast. Not long after, her housekeeper would send up a tray of hot food with hot tea and strong ale. She pulled the door shut behind her and met an empty table as she made her way to a couch to sit down and relax. Smells of apples permeated the room and they made her mouth water at the thought of eating. She laughed a little as she picked up a slice of apple and bit into it. She looked back at a painting that stood a few feet away and smiled again at a feathered owl sitting on a branch. It knew that it was free, happy, and safe.
