You may want to take advantage of the ability to create, edit, and apply more than one layer of image enhancement and masking.

You may want to consider learning this technique as you become a master of Photoshop. The tools in Photoshop are fairly intuitive. They work very much like the tools you are used to using on a drawing tablet. However, the process is a bit more complex, so don't be thrown off by the interface. In Chapter 2, you learn about the layers tools that enable you to create new layers for multiple purposes. Using the Layers panel and the Add Layer dialog box, you can add layers for the following purposes:

Blending an image with another one: You can add layers to blend two or more images or to add grayscale, spot, or burn effects.

You may have already seen the option to merge layers, which enables you to create a selection or lightbox mask, and can merge multiple layers together. This feature is extremely useful when making photographic selections. Creating a multi-image selection:

You can create a selection mask that spans multiple images. You can then save the selection and move it to a new Photoshop document. Creating a layer mask: If you create a mask for a new layer, you can use it to create a selection, an adjustment layer, or an action. Setting a Photoshop layer's Opacity When you're working on a layer, you may find that you want to apply an Opacity setting to the layer. If you set the Opacity to a number that's less than 100 percent, you can still see parts of the layer, but you may still want to use the layer so that you can see the other part of the layer underneath it. You can add an Opacity mask setting to almost all of the layers in Photoshop and even to layers of image effects — a combination of various effects or a single effect.

You can apply the Opacity mask setting by using one of the following methods: Choose Layer⇒Opacity⇒Add Opacity Mask.

Choose the Layer Mask icon at the bottom of the Layers panel. Click the eye icon to the left of the layer and choose Opacity⇒Add Opacity Mask. Choose Layer⇒Layer Mask⇒Add Layer Mask. Choosing a color for a selection As your working on an image, one of the most essential aspects of this process

CityZ CityZ was a free software platform for the discovery, creation, mobile and open-access (DAO) publication of all kinds of content, 3D and 2D, in one integrated environment. The purpose of the platform is to provide a computer-based tool for the non-experts. The platform is based on the CityGML data standard and therefore enables interoperability between communities without a common data standard, and integration between GIS or CAD data, for example. This technology allows, for example, the integration of the database from proprietary GIS, CAD, or administration solutions. The platform relies on OpenStreetMap data and is accessible via any Internet browser and mobile devices. Currently available editions are: Free Community edition available in the form of a Linux-based 32-bit and 64-bit virtual machine (VM) on an ESX hypervisor (free software).
