Q: Converting text box to image on click event of checkbox using JavaScript? In my form I have a text box and a check box. The user has to enter a number in the text box and a check box should be selected when the user clicks on the check box. Now what I am doing is that I am using JavaScript to convert the text box into an image when the user clicks the check box. Here is my code: Here is the JavaScript code: `function checkthis(id) { var val = $("#" + id).val(); if (val!= "" &&!val.match(/[a-z]$/i)) { $("#" + id).css("background-image", "url("); } else { $("#" + id).val(val); $("#" + id).css("background-image", "url("); } }` The text box converts into an image and another problem is that the text box does not convert back to a text box when the check box is checked. So any idea how to resolve these issues? A: Just return false on your onclick and not do an else statement. JSfiddle

IT0018],[@CIT0019] The favorable role of endometriosis in survival may be associated with the earlier detection of breast cancer in symptomatic patients. Most studies reported that endometriosis was frequently detected in young women with symptomatic breast cancer. A large population-based study[@CIT0020] showed that the likelihood of being diagnosed with endometriosis was significantly higher in women under 40 years of age than in older women. The large multicentre cohort study,[@CIT0021] which included more than 20,000 women, found that the proportion of women with breast cancer was 6.0 times higher in women with endometriosis than in those without. Furthermore, the patients with endometriosis had a 1.4 times higher risk of being diagnosed with breast cancer at an early stage.[@CIT0022] This difference in detection rate may be explained by the presence of symptoms more frequently observed in endometriosis, such as dysmenorrhea and dyspareunia.[@CIT0023] Women with endometriosis also had a 1.3 times higher risk of recurrence.[@CIT0024] In the univariate analysis, we found that women with endometriosis were more likely to be diagnosed at a more advanced stage, more likely to receive chemotherapy or endocrine therapy, and had a higher rate of recurrence than those without endometriosis. However, multivariate analysis revealed that only the presence of endometriosis was a statistically significant prognostic factor for survival among breast cancer patients. Current oncology guidelines do not recommend the use of chemotherapy in patients with early-stage, hormone-receptor-positive, non-metastatic breast cancer. Even in patients with tumor burden outside of the breast, positive lymph nodes, or positive margins, chemotherapy has not demonstrated a survival benefit.[@CIT0007],[@CIT0025]--[@CIT0028] Recently, four large population-based studies revealed that chemotherapy was associated with increased survival for all stages of breast cancer.[@CIT0021],[@CIT0029]--[@CIT0031] However, a small randomized clinical trial[@CIT0032] and meta-analysis[@CIT0033] suggested that it was associated with a significant increase in local, regional, and distant recurrence and a non-significant increase in all-cause mortality.
