We extend our sympathies to the community of Loyola High School. Dr. Humes has been principal of LHSB for the past eight years, and has led the school to a position of sustained growth and a first in the current uniform budget that was recently approved by the Manila City Council. We also offer our deep appreciation to the cohort of teachers, administrators, professionals and alumni of LHSB who served under him and contributed to the success of the school. We would like to thank Dr. Humes for his leadership and cooperation which helped LHSB to become one of the leading schools in the Philippines. As the school goes through a pivotal time, the School Board will work with the principal to explore the possibilities of the LHSB campus. The Office of the President will support the school administration in its efforts to search for an ideal environment to serve the Loyola College

What's new in Lumexa:

: We were top 5 last year. We had a great showing from our community. A big shout out to you, residents of Boston! Andrea Manna: With the BioTech Forum, one of our initiatives was really addressing the impact of policy and regulation on technology. We spent a lot of time telling people that not only is Boston a great place to live and raise children, it is a great place to bring technology and innovation because the environment is right, the educational infrastructure is right, and there are an investment of resources. So we are very excited in Boston because our track record in the last year or two has been strong. Lumexa: You have something called "The Boston BioTech Score Card," aimed at giving people easy access to information on biotech entities in the region. At what point is achieving that available to the public? Andrea Manna: I can't think of a finer way to describe what we do. It's a highlight reel of what we have been able to do in the space in that short amount of time. So I think it's something that anyone in the city would benefit from. You have to remember, we are really having to work with some of the first draft of the plan for the city, and many of the things in the score card are really projected into planning. So we are not ready to release the score card in terms of availability of the public. We are really waiting for the final product. But in terms of ours you are absolutely right - we are providing access to a lot of information that we are developing now. Lumexa: Have you ever had a response from the media that you disagree with? Andrea Manna: What is great about the media is they are there to illuminate a very broad stage, and this is really so great to get feedback like you are getting and keep at it. That is a cornerstone of what we do in this community, and I think it is important. We are in the business of bringing and retaining talent. You know, it is just as important to live here as to work here, and this is something that we have heard from the community. And everyone on the team is excited about where we are going, because we are very focused on this. Lumexa: Any policy-makers you are really excited about? Andrea Manna: Uh, Rob, you know
