According to what we can gather from new job listings, E3 is the location of where it's being announced. In Bethesda's old space. Yeah. The game is said to be a new take on the Elder Scrolls franchise that's coming from game developer ZeniMax. The ambitious action-RPG is also being called "the first new IP launched from the iconic publisher in almost a decade." We're starting to get a picture of what it will look like. Elder Scrolls Online Will Be The First New IP From Bethesda In Nearly A Decade According to Game Informer, two new jobs have been posted by ZeniMax: Director, Production Services Senior Combat Designer We're gonna need the rest of that last one to get a pretty good picture of what they're shooting for with the game. All we really know is that it looks to be a huge RPG. Some of the details they've already released, including their old website showing off the whole campaign and plot, are reminiscent of the Elder Scrolls games. "Set in the vast and beautiful world of Tamriel, Elder Scrolls Online invites players to explore, adventure and build the greatest settlement in the land," the game is said to describe. "In the free-to-play massively multiplayer online role-playing game, players can choose from one of many character classes including warriors, magicians and more." If you want to get a better idea of what they're planning, check out this teaser: Bethesda may not have done anything for six years, but they're bringing back the beloved franchise and it looks like it's going to be fairly similar to the original games. Considering the fan base they're going up against, it's a pretty big thing they♦
