latitudes of the earth. The scientific names aurora australis (southern lights) and aurora borealis (northern lights) both come from Latin, meaning "dawn" and "northern lights", respectively. The aurora australis (or southern lights) is an emission of the upper atmosphere and can be seen from the tropics to around the equator. These aurora are light and slender, only a couple of millimetres in diameter. Sometimes they can even be observed over a significant distance, and are caused by energetic processes in the solar system. The aurora australis is a result of the interaction of solar radiation with the atmosphere, charged particles from the Sun bombard the Earth's atmosphere at close to the speed of light, ionising (striking) the atoms of the atmosphere. The ionised atoms combine with other particles to form the aurora which then shines with visible light. The ionised atoms may also leave the atmosphere, becoming part of the ionosphere. ### What's New in the Aurora Screensaver?

This is a beautiful screensaver with wispy lights in the sky. It is named for the Aurora Borealis, and will change the Aurora to the Aurora Australis. Bridging the big ocean between the Persian Gulf and the Indian Ocean, Saudi Arabia is the nation ranked third as one of the world's largest oil exporters, pumping over 4.1 million barrels per day of oil, or 10.3% of global production. Still a cash-cow rich in natural gas, copper and water, Saudi Arabia's demographic profile can only strengthen, as a long-run sustainable framework of growth for the country can only come from reducing the youthful dependency. Investment in education and health should therefore be the priority of Saudi policy makers. The Saudi Arabian government has initiated reforms that now open up the nation for reforms within the social, political and economic institutions. The mantra of the new government is that the old social order that was set in place by King Abdulaziz and his successors is no longer relevant, and that a new social order is being established that allows the Saudi Arabian citizen to have the right to freely express him or herself and to have access to the means of doing so. Islamic law, and Sharia, is being reformed as well. The Saudi Arabian constitution is being reformed, and it is being examined to remove all aspects that clash with Islamic ideology. King Abdullah, who is now the king, is looking to reform Saudi Arabia from within. Reforms in social policy are being encouraged and thus there will be more emphasis on the quality of education, and a greater emphasis on health care. The Saudi

Arabian king is looking towards modernizing the nation to create a more open and a freer society. In that same vein, King Abdullah is lifting the ban on cinemas and allowing them into Saudi Arabia for the first time since a time when motion picture production was illegal. Women, who were previously banned from driving, will now be able to do so. As King Abdullah looks to create change, he is aware of the rapidly changing dynamics of the global economy. New opportunities for Saudi Arabia in the new global economy must be taken advantage of, and that means a globalized economy. King Abdullah is looking to increase Saudi's manufacturing capacity so that the nation is able to take advantage of these opportunities. Saudi Arabia is moving to eliminate the nation's dependence on oil by looking to a more diversified economy, and the nation is looking to increase its use of high tech companies and to increase its use
