Shoeless Joe Jackson became the Major League Baseball's first black player after the 1919 season, and he played for seven teams in eight seasons in the big leagues. He passed away in 1961. In the midst of the Black Sox scandal, which saw players and gamblers try to fix the World Series of 1919, Shoeless Joe was the player who was rumored to have "sold out," taking money from the gamblers in exchange for throwing the World Series. He had by then been traded to the Chicago White Sox for a league-high $100,000, but the gamblers denied that he was part of their plot. Joe wasn't charged, and received a $3,000 fine for his alleged connection, but the scandal was widely believed and came as a shock to the baseball world at the time. The Seahawks made a coaching change this offseason and that change has been a simple one, with a player. The club turned to running back Thomas Rawls to replace once-injured Marshawn Lynch, and he's started his offseason conditioning on the track, according to Huskies Insider. Rawls ran an unofficial 4.45 at the combine, which would be the fastest time in team history. It was thought that Seattle had acquired Rawls to help Lynch, but the Seahawks placed him on injured reserve after Week 1, so he's not on the roster as it stands. He was a second-round pick of the Seahawks in the 2013 NFL draft. The 6-foot-3, 244-pound Rawls is currently No. 59 on the NFL's active running back list. Rawls ran for 4,003 yards and 25 touchdowns as a senior at UCLA in 2013. Seattle hosts the Atlanta Falcons in its first preseason game this Saturday.#!/bin/sh scriptname=$0 test -z "$scriptname" && scriptname="$(basename "$0")" test -z "$scriptname" && scriptname="$(basename "$(pwd)/$0")" # Description # Build an "ifupdown-generic" image.
