The barbecuing grill comes in multiple designs and forms to accommodate food preparation. The barbecuing grill gives a person a great facility for food preparation over an open fire. There are a variety of barbecuing grills which exist and the types of barbecuing grills that are commonly used today by people for food preparation purposes. Barbecuing grills are an ideal place for people to eat food because they allow a person to cook their food while sitting on the ground. For instance, a person can sit on the ground and cook his/her food over the fire. The food can be placed on a tray or a platform and then a cover is placed over the food to retain heat and to prevent the food from burning. These barbecuing grills are not only useful for barbecuing purposes, but they are also useful for many other purposes including cooking functions. There are many types of barbecuing grill and there are many benefits to using this type of barbecuing grill. For instance, the barbecuing grill can increase the visibility of a person while barbecuing. With the barbecuing grill, the person can be seen from a distance by other people and this can provide a person with an advantage when barbecuing food. Another advantage of barbecuing grills is that one can grill food for long periods of time. When barbecuing food, a person can grill food for a number of hours at a time which is very beneficial. Finally, the barbecuing grill offers people a way to use the barbecue which would otherwise sit idle. While barbecuing, people can grill food, cut up large pieces of meat, chop vegetables, cook vegetables or whatever other functions they wish to perform with the barbecuing grill. Therefore, there is a need for a barbecuing grill that addresses the above mentioned problems, as well as other problems. There is also a need for a barbecuing grill that allows a user to improve his/her product design. It will be appreciated that some references are listed in more than one category. John C. Wright House The John C. Wright House is a historic house at 70-72 College Street in Fitchburg, Massachusetts. The two story wood frame house was built c. 1820. It is one of only a few period houses in the city still in its original form. The house was listed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1984. Description and history The John C. Wright House is located northeast of downtown Fitchburg, on the east side of College Street at its junction with Webster Street. It is a two-story wood frame structure, with a front-facing gable roof, clapboarded exterior, and a stone foundation. A two-story ell extends to the rear on the right side. The main facade is symmetrical, with a center entrance framed by four-over-four sash windows. The entry is capped by a fanlight with simple moulding. A second entrance is placed next to the gable, and a third between the chimneys. The structure is surrounded by an enclosed porch and secondary entrance. The main block of the house is a rectangular structure with roughly-jigsaw-cut corners. It is two bays wide and four deep, the main entrance to the right. Its simple architectural elements, with flushboard siding and clapboards above, are in sharp contrast to a Federal or Greek Revival or Italianate style, making it appear to be a rough-cut version of those styles. The roof is gabled, with a series of round-arch windows in the second story that do not correspond to the window bays. A small rear addition to the left of the main block is of 6d1f23a050
