I am trying to compile a website. When I make it available from my web server using https, the relative URL's for files like images, and static assets all work fine. On the server (not my web server but a remote one), it doesn't seem to be working. I get Error 10010 when I try to access the web server. The only way I have been able to reproduce the problem is by doing this: 1) Installing NPM and creating a new project 2) Adding a route to a file in the project, to do basic logging, using a relative URL in my src/ directory for the assets: `app.use(function(req,res,next) { console.log(req.path); next(); });` 3) Finally, running the server from the command line, using this syntax: `node server.js -p 4000` In this scenario, when I hit `localhost:4000/images/logo.png`, I get an error from the remote webserver's log: 10010: Connection refused Doing a `mvn install` on a class and generating the war file produces the exact same result. Why is this? A: Make sure you are telling Express to serve your static assets over HTTPS. I have also added this on my development server: app.use(express.static(__dirname + '/public',{ expires: 7, maxAge: 1 6d1f23a050
