I don't know why I can't make a simple copy constructor like I have tried: class ClassA { private: ClassA(ClassA&); std::string a; ClassA(std::string); } I want to have a copy constructor that takes a ClassA as reference and changes all the string members. Something like: class ClassB { private: ClassA a; } ClassA& ClassB::A(const ClassA&); A: Your last constructor can't be declared after your member variable, because a is private. You can make a constructor that does what you want like this: class ClassA { private: ClassA(ClassA&); std::string a; ClassA(std::string const&); } // this is for your reference copy constructor class ClassB { private: ClassA a;
