If you and your spouse loved watching the TV show “Friends” and loved the character Ross Geller, you may have to get used to seeing a lot less of that character on your TV screen. Yes, Hollywood is taking the message of the Book of Matthew (“For where two or three are gathered in my name, there am I there among them.”) to heart. The apocalyptic “end times” narratives are losing their appeal for Hollywood, what with the higher production budgets demanded by the studios. Like “House of Cards,” the upcoming movie “The Great Wall” will cost a reported $150 million to produce. The future of Hollywood is giving the glory to scriptwriters and producers and not the actors and directors. That’s the message of a new book by Larry Crandall, who was a co-writer on “Friends” for five seasons. In “Friends: The Seinfeld Chronicles,” Crandall reminds us that while Hollywood may be “the place where dreams are made,” it’s a tough place to make your dreams come true. So what happened? Crandall believes it was the rejection of Ross Geller from Yale University. Crandall wrote the episode, “The One With The Turtle,” which never aired on the show, but is the best viewed among the “Friends” episodes by fans. Crandall says, “People were saying, ‘You’ve just alienated the American public, and you’re going to have a difficult time in Hollywood.’” Yes, Ross Geller got rejected, but in Hollywood you really have to get rejection. Crandall learned as a young writer how to handle rejection. At 17, Crandall was rejected by a small college newspaper in a story he wrote about a “guy on his back with a very beautiful woman with one leg in the air, and, yes, he” 6d1f23a050
