Android phone I have a VB.NET application running on my HTC Desire and I would like to share a folder on the SD card. The folder is under \My Documents\EurekaLogs On the phone itself I have selected the button to share the folder on my network. I then enable the share when setting up the phone. I then select network drive and enter \My Documents\EurekaLogs. I have chosen "Set as default network share" (yes the SD card was actually mounted in the phone and not the usb drive) and of course I fill out the details and connect. I don't have a problem that I can see the folder on my machine, but I haven't figured out how I can get it to show up on my phone... My questions are - is what I am doing the correct way to set up the network share? (I have been working with Windows for so long, Android is a total alien to me) Am I missing anything else? A: First step is to make sure that the path you're trying to connect to (like \\WTFever instead of My Documents\EurekaLogs) is actually available to other computers. After connecting through the phone (and your computer
