
Tekken 5 For PC Highly Compressed Just 30 Mb

believe it or not there are some good game out there that uses old tech that us old enough to remember its got a good story. anyone ever played the battle in babylon 5 game for the gba? my friend has played it multiple times and we had a blast (actually we should work on the next babylon 5 game to rectify this one!). for the graphics i'd rather play the hd version of ultimate marvel vs capcom 3 than tekken 6. i have a beef with it just because it wasn't an established franchise and couldn't get the production quality. i also feel that the action has slowed down due to the performance of the console, and looks boring and generic. it not only was one of the first fighting games on the gba but one of the best. tekken 6 should have had the best graphics and character pack out of the first five games, and the gameplay is still very appealing. just put taht game on the box and a release date of when it was actually released. id probably be happier with it though, since all the fighting games before it had better or similar graphics as far as i can remember. story not as good as the first, there is no really long story mode, the missions are never long enough or interesting, the character's can be decently cool but it's never really a drama driven story, the bosses are either not fun enough or are too easy to beat, the game is kinda boring and unenjoyable, i also do not like the new characters that aren't from the first tekken, i know the roster was expanded to fit the new tekken 6 but it kinda sucks. the game is fun in that it's like a really fun to play game, but it's fun in that it's fun only if you like the characters.

maninowo7 ok i
just remembered
that on new years
eve i saw the
tekken grand
chase trailer on
youtube, and i
remembered that there was another

video preview of the game, but it was a 360's version of the game, so i thought that it wasn't a legit preview, but after finding out that there was already a 360 version of the game, i was excited to see how the game looks like, because it looks like it would've just took tekken's tekken 3. the game was looking very detailed for a 360 game, and the only bad thing was that the characters only had 1-2 punches, but that is just a minor thing, also it was great because the first character was a boxing character. but my biggest problem was how tekken series before it was looking super cool, now it just looks kind of lame. why would they change the game so much? and before tekken 5 came out they were releasing a game every year with characters from the tekken

universe, but now
that the series
has almost
reached the end,
why? the only
character that
you could talk
about is heihachi,
he is cool because
is unique, and
some other characters are

cool, but they are just too rare to appear in tekken series until now. other characters should be considered, they didn't appear in tekken 4, tekken 5, tekken tag toukout, tekken 6, tekken 7, but they should be important. i think heihachi should be the main character, if he were to appear in any other tekken game, he has to be the main character, because if he appeared in

tekken tag
toukout, he would
have a costume
similar to
heihachi's, but
why they didn't
make him main
character is a
mystery for me. if
the series would start this way, i
wouldn't be

complaining
about its
repetitiveness,
because tekken 5
for me was just tekken, i was
looking forward to
the next game,
but now that the
series is ending,
why would they
take the risk to

change
everything? and
this reminds me a
lot with dragon
ball, they are
waiting for the
new dragon ball
movie to come
out, so they
announced
dragon ball gt
first, and then it

was fixed to gtz,
and now they just
announced gtzz,
and i'm thinking
the same thing,
why don't they
start from
scratch? because
if they don't re-
make them, then
the dragon ball
series would have

suffered a lot,
because the new
movies are more
fun, and if they
would continue as
the old series,
then the new
movies would have looked like a
downgraded
series. but with
the tekken series,

the new movies
won't be as good
as the old series,
because they will
never be as good
so if they
continue as tekken, then the
new movies
would be a

tekken. just my 2
cents..but thank
you for allowing
me to rant about
this and what i
feel about it.
