The Sun is the life giver and source of energy and light for Earth. Without it, the human race would have an extremely difficult time surviving. But there's much more to the Sun than its initial energy source. For every 10 hours of direct sunlight, the Sun continually releases 2,000 watts of energy to the atmosphere, heating the Earth's surface to an average of 62 °C (135 °F) and providing a suitable environment for human life.Oil is the basic raw material source for every good thing on Earth, from cosmetics to toothpaste, in every shampoo, cream, and product we use and eat. The energy of Oil gives us not only the essential good things in life, but also the means to make many things we need to live. Every time we put oil in our car, we get back more than 20 kilometers of travel. Stores light and heat when they are not needed, so it is not possible to consume the energy of Oil gives us not only the essential good things in life, but also the means to make many things we need to live.
