I have this code: var count:Int = 0 let startDate: NSDate = NSDate() let endDate: NSDate = NSDate() let predicate: NSPredicate = NSPredicate(format: "SELF.beginDate > %@", startDate) let objects = (self.managedObjectContext!.executeFetchRequest(request, error: &error) as NSArray).filteredArrayUsingPredicate(predicate) as NSArray for object in objects{ println(object) count = count + 1 } I get the error on the line: let objects = (self.managedObjectContext!.executeFetchRequest(request, error: &error) as NSArray).filteredArrayUsingPredicate(predicate) as NSArray Intellisense says Cannot convert value of type 'Int' to expected argument type 'AnyObject' I have no idea how to fix this. A: There is a lot going on here. The first problem is that you are declaring count as a primitive type Int. It is not in an init function context, and therefore cannot be used as a type. The next problem is that your for loop is iterating over the objects, but you've retrieved them from your managedObjectContext by using the executeFetchRequest function of the context. There is no guarantee that the objects returned from the executeFetchRequest function will be of type NSArray. Probably what you intended to do was just to iterate
