DawesThe present invention relates generally to sheet feeding and transporting systems, and more particularly to a system for feeding and transporting sheets or the like in a copier or the like. Sheet feeding devices, or sorters, are known in the prior art for feeding sheets in a copier. An example of such a sorter is shown in FIG. 1. Sheet feeding apparatus 101 is mounted in a copier or other copy machine for feeding individual sheets (not shown) to the copy machine. The sheet feeding apparatus 101 includes four rollers 111, 112, 113, and 114 which are arranged in a sheet feeding path 101. The first roller 111 is driven by a motor, and the other three rollers are arranged in pairs 112, 113, and 114 such that each pair cooperates with the adjacent roller. The sheet feeding apparatus 101 is divided into four regions between rollers 111 and 112, between rollers 112 and 113, between rollers 113 and 114, and between rollers 114 and 115. Each of the regions are defined by boundaries 115a, 115b, 116a, and 116b, respectively. Sheets are fed into the sheet feeding apparatus 101 and are delivered to the copy machine (not shown) at a predetermined speed through the sheet feeding path 101. As the sheets pass through the sheet feeding path 101, the sheets are each struck by the pairs of rollers 112, 113, and 114 which are positioned along the sheet feeding path 101. Each pair of rollers 112, 113, and 114 have a fixed diameter. At the outlet side of the sheet feeding apparatus 101, a nip is formed between the roller 111 and the roller 112, and between the roller 112 and the roller 113. Thus, the nip between the pair of rollers 112 and 113 is located at the outlet side of the sheet feeding apparatus 101. However, the nip between the roller 113 and the roller 114 is located at the inlet side of the sheet feeding apparatus 101. Each of the rollers 111, 112, 113, and 114 have a fixed diameter. The rollers 111, 112, 113, and 114 are driven to rotate
