1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to communications and more particularly to a communications system, method, and apparatus for enabling one party to a first group to communicate with a second party in a second group, where both groups are contained within the communications system.

2. Background of the Invention It is often desirable to send a short message to a group of people, such as a person, a place, a topic, or a list. For example, a person might send a short message, such as "Meet in 20 minutes at Starbucks", to many or all of the members of a group. Or a person might send a short message to a group of people to disseminate information, such as a short message "We are going on vacation to Paris in 3 weeks". Or a person might send a short message to a group of people to take a vote, such as a short message "Who will get a cupcake today?" The short message service (SMS) is popular due to its convenience of use and speed of delivery. Currently, SMS is used in virtually every country of the world, and is rapidly becoming a preferred mechanism for sending and receiving short text messages. The SMS has been extended to support the delivery of multi-media messages via the use of the messaging service Multimedia Messaging Service (MMS). With MMS, a user can incorporate images, video, and audio with the text in the short message. A number of problems are related to the lack of access to Internet access, Web pages, and information providers that restrict access of their pages and data to certain geographic regions. In particular, web pages associated with radio stations in one geographic region cannot be accessed from another geographic region.

Landmark case in Cuba 15 March 2019 Last week, a groundbreaking ruling has been handed down in Havana City Court: The ruling bans foreign media from entering the country, reports the Havana Times. Under the 2008 law regulating foreign media, journalists from any country can enter the country only with the express permission of the Cuban government, and then only if they do
