References Category: Villages in Bhutan Simplifying stent implantation with the Palmaz legacy stent (covered with the Paclitaxel-eluting biodegradable polymer) in de novo coronary lesions: comparison with the sirolimus-eluting stent and the Taxus sirolimus-eluting stent. The Palmaz stent has been used successfully for coronary stent implantation in clinical trials. However, the Palmaz stent design is complex with its braided mesh mesh ring and attached sleeve. We describe the use of a novel stent system (the Palmaz Legacy stent) that offers the potential for faster and simplified stent delivery. A Palmaz Legacy stent was deployed in 94 de novo coronary lesions (total of 778 lesions) using a newer version of the Palmaz stent delivery system, the Mark 1-Stent Delivery System, consisting of the Stent-Delivery System with the Stent-Release System and Stent-Implantation System. The in vivo performance and safety of the Palmaz Legacy stent was compared with those of the Palmaz First Pass and the SES. The Palmaz Legacy stent was successfully implanted in all lesions. In-hospital major adverse cardiac event and stent thrombosis rates were 4.3% and 0.6
