It allows users to collaborate and send images to one another directly within Photoshop without having to first save a copy, sign into a Share or Save for Web service, or switch to another application. It also enables you to share only a portion of your work, such as a selection, annotate the image, or add your own comments. You can go back to your original image at any time and see that your changes are currently stored in "their" version of the file. First select an area of an image and then hit the new Delete button or select what represents the area to be replaced, which makes it possible to quickly replace the area of an image with a new location or object without having to apply multiple steps (Removing and adding paths, for example). You can also balance the transparency of a Fill to produce a more seamless appearance.
