I have found Onejs and Iron-data-binding, but they seem to be targeted at ASP.NET (for one, the namespace is just iron-data-binding; for the other, it's "x-onejs") or at JSP (iron-data-binder: "iron-data-binder.x-onejs-components"); it doesn't seem to be possible to get unobtrusive, or to use with regular javascript. At the moment, I'm using the ASP.NET unobtrusive mechanism, but it lacks the communication between components and the regular javascript. Does anyone know of a workable/supported framework for this? A: This article talks about the pros and cons of data-binding versus using a JavaScript library (jQuery in this case) to enable data-binding. It's interesting and worth a read. Q: QGIS export CSV for conditional features I am currently working with a polygon shapefile with conditional features. I would like to create an export CSV with the shapefiles and the conditional features to be saved in one CSV file. How can I accomplish that? A: This is called an "attributes by
